(If you reply, please indicate LAT and LON)

Dear Mrs. Merkel,

congratulations! On January 20 we will place a virtual 3D bomb in the Chancellor's Office. The bomb is completely harmless. You can use your premises just as you did before. We don't expect any limitations. There are no costs arising for you. Since the positioning is done from the outside, you don't have to make an appointment with a technician.

The positioning of virtual 3D bombs in private and public spaces is not limited by any law. Nevertheless we kindly ask you to return to us the attached prepaid postcard with your consent by January 18 at the latest. (Please note, however, that the placement is realised even without your consent. If you absolutely don't want a bomb, you can raise an objection. Please let us know at least one of your certainly well-founded reasons. Please use the postcard to do so.)

The bomb itself is invisible. But if you are a smartphone user you may have a look at its detonator (see attached Affected People Information). Alternatively you can build a paper model yourself using the attached cut out sheet.

"Augmented Bombings" is an art action fighting virtual trash in the so called "Augmented Reality" by courageous 3D bombing. Responsible for the project is Susanne Berkenheger.

Sincerely Yours

Susanne Berkenheger
